MEDITATION OF THE DAY: Consumed By Our Life's Mission

Dearest friend, I had wanted so much to reply earlier to your wonderful epistles, even more so because I was truly moved by reading them, but things to be done in these times lately have prevented me from responding promptly. My poor mental capacity doesn't allow me to write a letter worthy of yours, but accept the few words which express to you the gratitude of my heart for your words of comfort which you wanted to send me.

Yes, oh dear friend, this is a grave moment for me, because in these days the sister who I unfortunately never appreciated as much as in these days when she is far from me has left home. The struggle is hard, but it is also necessary to overcome and to find again our little road to Damascus so that we can march along it toward the Goal which we all should attain . . . Certainly the faith is still the sole anchor of salvation to which we must grasp strongly: without it what would our whole life be? It would be spent uselessly because in the world there is only sorrow, and sorrow without faith is unbearable, while sorrow nourished by the torch of the faith becomes a beautiful thing because it fortifies the soul in its struggles. In today's struggle, I cannot but thank God because he has willed in his infinite mercy to grant this sorrow to my heart so that by means of these arduous thorns I might return to a life that is more interior, more spiritual. Until this age, I was living too materially and now I need to refortify my soul for future struggles because from now on every day, every hour there will be a new battle to fight and a new victory to conquer. A spiritual upheaval must take place in me and thus this year I will devote myself to reading Saint Thomas Aquinas; thus absorbed in those marvelous pages, every thought of the world will die and I will live happy days because only they give to the heart that joy which has no end since it is not human and is true joy.

There is another thing which should unite us and it is holy love—holy because it is the everlasting fire which ought to consume a Christian heart; we should be nourished by it because without charity every other virtue has no worth.

And now I must leave you. Cordial greetings in Jesus Christ.

CCC 291. What is required to receive Holy Communion?

To receive Holy Communion one must be fully incorporated into the Catholic Church and be in the state of grace, that is, not conscious of being in mortal sin. Anyone who is conscious of having committed a grave sin must first receive the sacrament of Reconciliation before going to Communion. Also important for those receiving Holy Communion are a spirit of recollection and prayer, observance of the fast prescribed by the Church, and an appropriate disposition of the body (gestures and dress) as a sign of respect for Christ.

Sermon in A Sentence

The Eucharist manifests and makes real the family unity of the entire Church. In order to share in the sacrifice of Christ and to receive His body and blood as food, the Church gathers as family at the table of God's Word and the table of the Lord's Bread. (P81, 175)
